

Davidson's Furniture, Meridian, Porch Home & Garden, Old World Rugs, Traditions, Daylight Home & Garden, McConnell Art Consulting, and Fortini offered excellent personal service to move the project along swiftly.

top: Furniture maker Peter Doyle rushed the custom cherry headboard for delivery and installation. Christy DeVicente, owner of Curtain Call, and I worked together on the custom window treatments layered with tapestry cornice boxes, linen drapery panels and woven bamboo shades. Chameleon Fabrics in Arroyo Grande served up the gorgeous reversible custom bedding in the master bedroom in a luscious hand woven floral, surrounded by rich chenille and elegant trims.

above: Even with breathtaking views, the house needed art. Before any furniture was delivered, we hung a 36" x 48" oil on linen painting of the Estuary in Morro Bay entitled, "Embraced by the Light" in the dining room. A William Morris-inspired tapestry from Fortini at the top of the stairs reflects a design reminiscent of the British Arts & Crafts Movement of the late 19th century. Two more paintings from McConnell Art Consulting added beautifully to the initial collection of original art for the home.

These and many more features made the home attractive to buyers, but difficult to part with, when Molnar and Shea decided to place it on the market as it neared completion.

"It was hard to let go," Molnar recalls, "but it sold to a wonderful couple from the Central Valley who appreciated the craftsmanship."

Realtor Richard Sanpei sold the home and referred the new owners to me for interior design. My mandate from the clients was to "support the local economy and be done as soon as possible."
